Similarities

- Job is given when meeting a standard in the novel "The Giver" and the movie "GATTACA."

- Strict rules in both communities for people to obey.

- Healthy babies have more opportunity to survive in the community of both societies.

- Jonas and Vincent are both unique in their societies.

Utopia society

Utopian Society

Rules

-No drugs dealing in the society
Drugs should not even exist in the society/community.

-Respectful toward everyone.
Speak to each other in a nice tone.

-Strict requirements for guns and ammunition, only polices are allowed to use guns.

No one in the society can apply for gun even if he or she have a firearm license.

People in the community have the freedom to make their own choices and decisions, which should also be an important rule in the utopian society.

Everyone in the giver community has no choice, no freedom. Almost every things are decided by the community in the novel "The Giver." People have no freedom or choices in the community. Eventually, this causes many problems in the giver society. For example, Jonas, the main character chooses to escape from the community. Also, in the movie Gattaca, people's jobs are decided when they are born. This causes the main character "Vincent" to get into the company illegally because he desires the job so much.

-People have freedom to make choices and decisions.

-No discrimination

No one should judge other person by their skin colour.

-Punishments are depended on the amount of mistakes that's been made.

Using a respectful tone to speak to others should be a rule in our utopian society. From the novel "The Giver," everyone in the community pays specific attention to their use of language. This can make all the people in the community feel respect for each other in all situations.

When people make mistakes, punishments and actions should take place. The amount of punishment will depend on the number of mistakes made by each person. For example, in the novel "The Giver," there are many harsh punishments take place. No matter how big the mistake is, the person will be released. However, that's not what will happen in our Utopia Society. We don't want people who have made small mistakes to get cruel punishment like the novel "The Giver." People who made small mistakes shouldn't get brutal punishments, therefore, people who made big mistakes shouldn't get easy punishment too.
