

True Friendships

Have you ever noticed that we're all 2-sided coins, we flip to the same side after being tossed together

We've all had that friendship that you feel close but, yet so far

Not all friendships are made to last, take it from me I've been there
We act like them

That 2-sided coin is tossed again, and suddenly I'm not the same. I'm them

The friendship starts drifting off, but you keep finding them because you think they are the only ones that understand you but then you realize you're better off without them

Moving on can be hard it feels like they're still your friends but are they really?

Instead of wasting your time on getting your friendship back start looking for that person that will create so many memories that will stick with you for centuries, because many people will walk in and out of your life but the true friends will leave a footprint with you forever

That friend will be like the sibling you always wanted

You might fight

But, at the end you'll make it right

They make you smile

All the while

At first it took me some time to find those true friends in my life so, when bad times came, I noticed the ones that stayed and those who disappeared

A true friend will always make you feel safe

A true friend will always bring out the best off you

A true friend will always care about you

A true friend is a flower if you care and treat them well they will give you happiness and stay with you forever

You don't always have to be with them as long as you keep them in your heart that friendship will never part

You talk they listen, you cry they give you their shoulder, you fall they give you a hand, your nervous they give you confidence, you need help they give you the best advice anyone could ever give you

That true friend is your shadow they always have your back

One day you will look back at all those photos, videos, birthday cards, and get sad because chances are you don't talk to them. So, once you've found that true friend keep them since they are irreplaceable

A true friend will be there till the end

-Mariana Adams